about

Now in its ninth year, Social Sciences Week is an annual showcase of the enormous breadth and impact of the social sciences in Australia. SSW brings together researchers, educators, policy makers, students and community organisations to highlight research and impact and to engage in conversations about important social issues.

Social Sciences Week is coordinated by the Academy of the Social Sciences in Australia, and supported by Australian universities and social science associations.

what

- Virtual and in-person events across the country
- A national launch event and coordinated publicity
- Randomly-selected grants for event organisers
- A national schools program featuring a Great Student Debate

Partner with the Academy or show your support for Social Sciences Week and get involved by hosting your own events.

If you host an event during Social Sciences Week, you will be acknowledged separately to sponsors with an event listing on the website.

Engaging Australia

Social Science Week engages audiences from across Australia with an enormous diversity of events and activities.

Highlights from the past few years include:

The Great Debate: the Academy's flagship program, bringing high school students and seasoned researchers together for live (and lively) team-based debates informed by social science evidence and expertise.

Film screening and panel discussion: Hosted by RMIT at Melbourne's Capitol Theatre (500+ capacity).

Peer Revue: Smart meets silly when cutting-edge research fuels improv comedy.

SOCIAL SCIENCES WEEK 2025 FEEDBACK

"The vibe was great and the calibre of panellists was amazing!"

"Events are usually very good quality and a wide range of topics."

"Congratulations on a great week. Thanks for making everything easy."

"The academics added professionalism and good use of humour in the topic"

"Everyone who was involved in the running of the event were really accommodating and impressive. Thank you for the experience!"

"I was impressed we were able to have a respectful and reasonable discussion on this subject"

SPARK GRANTS

$1,000 events grants, selected through random draw.

Introduced in 2025, SSW Spark Grants support university, research-sector and community-based organisations to stage engaging public events during Social Sciences Week.

Applications take 15 minutes and eligible recipients are selected through a conditional random ballot, ensuring equity and transparency with events supported across Australia and online.

The Cairns Institute at James Cook University received a Spark Grant to host an event celebrating Papua New Guinea’s 50th Anniversary of Independence

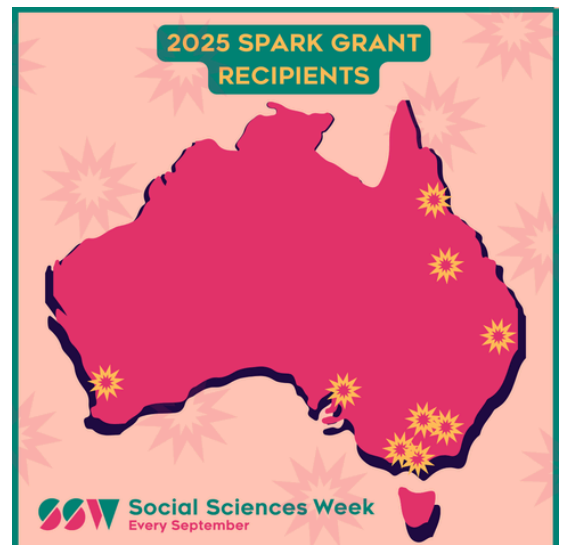

FEEDBACK FROM 2025 SPARK GRANT PARTICIPANTS

“I’m so grateful for the Spark Grants process. Even though we weren’t selected, it’s terrific to see an unbiased and accessible program supporting community organisations like ours.”

“I definitely would not have been able to do all these events without the Spark Grant.”

“The grants were very well planned and executed.”

“A terrific and very important program.”

Grand Challenge lunchtime talks

In 2026, the Academy will introduce a new program of Grand Challenge lunchtime talks to showcase the work of Academy Fellows and other social science researchers.

The talks will be held online during lunch hours and will be recorded and shared on the Academy's YouTube channel for maximum coverage and attendance.

The Grand Challenge lunchtime talks will focus on the ways social scientists are helping to solve the biggest issues facing Australian society, with topics including:

- Declining Trust in Democracy
- Rising Social Inequality
- Technological Transformation
- Truth-telling and Decolonisation
- Climate Change and Ecological Justice
- The Breakdown of the Global Economic & Political Order
- The Impacts of Demographic Changes
- Mis and Disinformation
- Post-COVID Public Health
- The Future of Work, Workplaces and the Workforce

Social Sciences Week sponsors will be invited to co-host a Grand Challenge lunchtime talk and submit a guest speaker and or/host from their organisation.
